Capping text

max-lines keeps a text to a number of lines, and ellipsis marks what it dropped.

Without a cap

One long name or address makes its whole row tall.

Product	Ship to	Qty
Desk lamp	12 Elm Street, Springfield	2
Adjustable standing desk frame with dual motors, four memory presets, a cable tray and a 160 × 80 cm top in oak finish	Attn. Receiving, dock B (use the side gate after 4pm), Harbor & Pine Co., 88 Market Square, Building 4, Floor 2, Burlington, VT 05401	1
Monitor arm	4 Quay Road, Portland	3

With a cap and an ellipsis

The product keeps one line and the address two, each ending in dots where text was dropped.

Product	Ship to	Qty
Desk lamp	12 Elm Street, Springfield	2
Adjustable standing desk frame with dual motors, fo...	Attn. Receiving, dock B (use the side gate after 4pm), Harbor & Pine Co., 88 Market Square, Building 4,...	1
Monitor arm	4 Quay Road, Portland	3

A cap without an ellipsis

max-lines="2" alone: the text stops at the end of its second line.

A description that runs on: it says what the product is, what it is made of, how it ships and

An ellipsis without a cap

ellipsis="true" alone changes nothing: the text wraps whole, and a word wider than its box is broken at the last character that fits, as in any text.

Shipping is free on orders over fifty dollars. Electroencephalographically

A capped text across a page break

This box fills the page so that the text after it starts with room for three lines. The text has max-lines="6" and ellipsis="true", and is long enough for many more lines.

The capped text starts here, near the bottom of the page. It is a long paragraph, the kind a terms and conditions block or a notes field holds, and it would fill much of the next page if nothing capped it. With max-lines it keeps its first six lines and drops the rest. The page break falls inside those six lines, so three of them stay on this page and three go to the next, and the last line kept ends in dots. Nothing past that line is drawn, on the next page or on any page after it, however much text there is. The words from here on only make the text long. A payment is due thirty days after the date of the invoice. Goods remain the...

This line follows the capped text on the next page.