Made with Lpdf

Counter: page. The notes of the numbers cut off take no room

Night 1. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a calm sea and fog at the point, and no ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[1]

Night 2. The lamp was lit at dusk, with rain from the south, and one ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[2]

Night 3. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a clear sky and a swell, and three ships passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[3]

Night 4. The lamp was lit at dusk, with gusts from the west, and a fishing boat passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[4]

Night 5. The lamp was lit at dusk, with snow at the gallery, and the mail steamer passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[5]

Night 6. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a light wind and haze, and two ships passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[6]

Night 7. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a gale from the north, and no ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[7]

Night 8. The lamp was lit at dusk, with wind from the north-west, and one ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[8]

Night 9. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a calm sea and fog at the point, and three ships passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[9]

Night 10. The lamp was lit at dusk, with rain from the south, and a fishing boat passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[10]

Night 11. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a clear sky and a swell, and the mail steamer passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[11]

Night 12. The lamp was lit at dusk, with gusts from the west, and two ships passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[12]

Night 13. The lamp was lit at dusk, with snow at the gallery, and no ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[13]

Night 14. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a light wind and haze, and one ship passed before midnight.

---

1 Night 1: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

2 Night 2: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

3 Night 3: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

4 Night 4: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

5 Night 5: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

6 Night 6: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

7 Night 7: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

8 Night 8: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

9 Night 9: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

10 Night 10: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

11 Night 11: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

12 Night 12: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

13 Night 13: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

Made with Lpdf

After the frame, a text with a note[1].

[1] The first note of its page: numbered 1.

Made with Lpdf

Counter: section. The numbers cut off are skipped

Night 1. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a calm sea and fog at the point, and no ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[1]

Night 2. The lamp was lit at dusk, with rain from the south, and one ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[2]

Night 3. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a clear sky and a swell, and three ships passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[3]

Night 4. The lamp was lit at dusk, with gusts from the west, and a fishing boat passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[4]

Night 5. The lamp was lit at dusk, with snow at the gallery, and the mail steamer passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[5]

Night 6. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a light wind and haze, and two ships passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[6]

Night 7. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a gale from the north, and no ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[7]

Night 8. The lamp was lit at dusk, with wind from the north-west, and one ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[8]

Night 9. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a calm sea and fog at the point, and three ships passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[9]

Night 10. The lamp was lit at dusk, with rain from the south, and a fishing boat passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[10]

Night 11. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a clear sky and a swell, and the mail steamer passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[11]

Night 12. The lamp was lit at dusk, with gusts from the west, and two ships passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[12]

Night 13. The lamp was lit at dusk, with snow at the gallery, and no ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[13]

Night 14. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a light wind and haze, and one ship passed before midnight.

[1] Night 1: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
[2] Night 2: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
[3] Night 3: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
[4] Night 4: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
[5] Night 5: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
[6] Night 6: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
[7] Night 7: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
[8] Night 8: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
[9] Night 9: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
[10] Night 10: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
[11] Night 11: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
[12] Night 12: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
[13] Night 13: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

Made with Lpdf

After the frame, a text with a note[25].

[25] Numbered 25: the 24 of the frame come before it, shown or not.

Made with Lpdf

Counter: document. The next section goes on past the numbers cut off

Night 1. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a calm sea and fog at the point, and no ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[1]

Night 2. The lamp was lit at dusk, with rain from the south, and one ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[2]

Night 3. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a clear sky and a swell, and three ships passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[3]

Night 4. The lamp was lit at dusk, with gusts from the west, and a fishing boat passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[4]

Night 5. The lamp was lit at dusk, with snow at the gallery, and the mail steamer passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[5]

Night 6. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a light wind and haze, and two ships passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[6]

Night 7. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a gale from the north, and no ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[7]

Night 8. The lamp was lit at dusk, with wind from the north-west, and one ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[8]

Night 9. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a calm sea and fog at the point, and three ships passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[9]

Night 10. The lamp was lit at dusk, with rain from the south, and a fishing boat passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[10]

Night 11. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a clear sky and a swell, and the mail steamer passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[11]

Night 12. The lamp was lit at dusk, with gusts from the west, and two ships passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[12]

Night 13. The lamp was lit at dusk, with snow at the gallery, and no ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[13]

Night 14. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a light wind and haze, and one ship passed before midnight.

---

1 Night 1: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
2 Night 2: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
3 Night 3: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
4 Night 4: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
5 Night 5: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
6 Night 6: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
7 Night 7: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
8 Night 8: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
9 Night 9: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
10 Night 10: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
11 Night 11: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
12 Night 12: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
13 Night 13: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

Made with Lpdf

The next section, a text with a note[25].

[25] Numbered 25: the section before holds 24.

Made with Lpdf

The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Record 1 ends here.[1] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Record 2 ends here.[2] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Record 3 ends here.[3] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Record 4 ends here.[4] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Record 5 ends here.[5] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Record 6 ends here.[6] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Record 7 ends here.[7] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Record 8 ends here.[8] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Record 9 ends here.[9] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Record 10 ends here.[10] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Record 11 ends here.[11] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Record 12 ends here.[12] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives

[1] Record 1: a note of the long text.

[2] Record 2: a note of the long text.

[3] Record 3: a note of the long text.

[4] Record 4: a note of the long text.

[5] Record 5: a note of the long text.

[6] Record 6: a note of the long text.

[7] Record 7: a note of the long text.

[8] Record 8: a note of the long text.

[9] Record 9: a note of the long text.

[10] Record 10: a note of the long text.

[11] Record 11: a note of the long text.

[12] Record 12: a note of the long text.

Footer, on every page

Made with Lpdf

After the box.

Made with Lpdf

The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Cell 1 ends here.[1] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Cell 2 ends here.[2] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Cell 3 ends here.[3] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Cell 4 ends here.[4] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Cell 5 ends here.[5] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Cell 6 ends here.[6] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the

A short cell[13].

[1] Cell 1: a note of the long text.

[2] Cell 2: a note of the long text.

[3] Cell 3: a note of the long text.

[4] Cell 4: a note of the long text.

[5] Cell 5: a note of the long text.

[6] Cell 6: a note of the long text.

[13] The note of the short cell.

Made with Lpdf

The second row of the grid[14].	Its other cell.

[14] The note of the second row.

Made with Lpdf

The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Column 1 ends here.[1] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Column 2 ends here.[2] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Column 3 ends here.[3] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Column 4 ends here.[4] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four

The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Beside 1 ends here.[5] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Beside 2 ends here.[6] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Beside 3 ends here.[7] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Beside 4 ends here.[8] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Beside 5 ends here.[9] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Beside 6 ends here.[10] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Beside 7 ends here.[11] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great

[1] Column 1: a note of the long text.
[2] Column 2: a note of the long text.
[3] Column 3: a note of the long text.
[4] Column 4: a note of the long text.
[5] Beside 1: a note of the long text.
[6] Beside 2: a note of the long text.
[7] Beside 3: a note of the long text.
[8] Beside 4: a note of the long text.
[9] Beside 5: a note of the long text.
[10] Beside 6: a note of the long text.
[11] Beside 7: a note of the long text.

Made with Lpdf

storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Beside 8 ends here.[1] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Beside 9 ends here.[2] The keepers of the northern coast kept a record of every evening they lit the lamp. Each entry gives the hour, the weather and the ships that passed before midnight. Most nights the last column stayed empty, and the keepers took some pride in that. In the winter of the great storm the record runs to four pages for a single night. Beside 10 ends here.[3]

[1] Beside 8: a note of the long text.

[2] Beside 9: a note of the long text.

[3] Beside 10: a note of the long text.

Made with Lpdf

A frame that brings the next line to the cut.

[1] Its number is cut through, and keeps its note.

Made with Lpdf

Every number of this frame is below the cut.

Made with Lpdf

The first page, below the header

Night 1. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a calm sea and fog at the point, and no ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[1]

Night 2. The lamp was lit at dusk, with rain from the south, and one ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[2]

Night 3. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a clear sky and a swell, and three ships passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[3]

Night 4. The lamp was lit at dusk, with gusts from the west, and a fishing boat passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[4]

Night 5. The lamp was lit at dusk, with snow at the gallery, and the mail steamer passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[5]

Night 6. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a light wind and haze, and two ships passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[6]

Night 7. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a gale from the north, and no ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[7]

Night 8. The lamp was lit at dusk, with wind from the north-west, and one ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[8]

Night 9. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a calm sea and fog at the point, and three ships passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[9]

Night 10. The lamp was lit at dusk, with rain from the south, and a fishing boat passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[10]

Night 11. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a clear sky and a swell, and the mail steamer passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[11]

Night 12. The lamp was lit at dusk, with gusts from the west, and two ships passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[12]

Night 13. The lamp was lit at dusk, with snow at the gallery, and no ship passed before midnight. The

1 Night 1: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
2 Night 2: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
3 Night 3: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
4 Night 4: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
5 Night 5: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
6 Night 6: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
7 Night 7: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
8 Night 8: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
9 Night 9: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
10 Night 10: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
11 Night 11: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.
12 Night 12: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

Made with Lpdf

The second page, with the room of a page without the header

Day 1. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a calm sea and fog at the point, and no ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[25]

Day 2. The lamp was lit at dusk, with rain from the south, and one ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[26]

Day 3. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a clear sky and a swell, and three ships passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[27]

Day 4. The lamp was lit at dusk, with gusts from the west, and a fishing boat passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[28]

Day 5. The lamp was lit at dusk, with snow at the gallery, and the mail steamer passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[29]

Day 6. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a light wind and haze, and two ships passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[30]

Day 7. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a gale from the north, and no ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[31]

Day 8. The lamp was lit at dusk, with wind from the north-west, and one ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[32]

Day 9. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a calm sea and fog at the point, and three ships passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[33]

Day 10. The lamp was lit at dusk, with rain from the south, and a fishing boat passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[34]

Day 11. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a clear sky and a swell, and the mail steamer passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[35]

Day 12. The lamp was lit at dusk, with gusts from the west, and two ships passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[36]

Day 13. The lamp was lit at dusk, with snow at the gallery, and no ship passed before midnight. The keeper trimmed the wick twice and wrote the entry by the light of the lamp itself.[37]

Day 14. The lamp was lit at dusk, with a light wind and haze, and one ship passed before midnight.

[25] Day 1: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

[26] Day 2: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

[27] Day 3: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

[28] Day 4: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

[29] Day 5: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

[30] Day 6: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

[31] Day 7: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

[32] Day 8: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

[33] Day 9: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

[34] Day 10: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

[35] Day 11: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

[36] Day 12: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.

[37] Day 13: the log gives the hour, the weather and the ships.