Overview

The rules of a markdown are elements, so the editor validates them, and a token file restyles them all. This paragraph is justified, and is long enough to wrap onto a few lines so that the spacing between its words shows, with the italic and the bold face of Times named in the rules of `em` and `strong`.

Details

- Square bullets from the `li` rule
- A gap of `s` between items
  - A nested list, with the same indent
- A link without an underline

> A quote on a wash, with a blue bar the height of the box and padding of its own.

Not listed

This heading is level 3, so with `bookmarks="2"` it is no bookmark and the contents do not list it.

Notes

rule  = element
style = attributes
```

Rule	Becomes
`h1`	a text
`code`	a box
`quote`	a table
